

Information for Submitting Articles to Law Reviews & Journals

March 2010

The following are two charts useful for the law review/journal article submission process. The first chart contains information gathered from the journals' websites about the following topics:

- Methods for submitting an article (such as by e-mail, ExpressO, or regular mail);
- Any special formatting requirements;
- How to request an expedited review; and
- How to withdraw an article after it has been accepted for publication elsewhere.

The second chart contains some information about rankings of the journals and the law schools associated with them. The first three columns are the overall ranking, academic/peer assessment score, and lawyer/judge assessment score for each school from the most recent U.S. News & World Report rankings. The other three columns are data about each journal from Washington & Lee's law review ranking website. The "citation ranking" is the total number of citations to the journal over the past eight years. The "impact factor" is the number of citations per article per year. The "combined rating" is a weighted combination of the total citations and impact factor rankings. You can find more detailed information about this data on the Washington & Lee website at <http://lawlib.wlu.edu/LJ>.

We hope this information is helpful. We provide it with several important caveats:

- First, the charts cover only each school's "general" law review, not specialized journals. Obviously there are excellent specialized journals on many topics. Anyone submitting an article to law reviews will want to consider the specialized journals relevant to their article and particular area of expertise.
- The charts cover 195 schools and their journals. We have tried to be comprehensive; any omissions are inadvertent, and we'd be happy to hear what we missed so that we can add them.
- We do not mean to imply anything about how much importance, if any, should be given to numerical rankings of law schools or law journals. These sorts of rankings are certainly an incomplete, if not badly flawed, way of evaluating schools and journals. We provide the ranking information because it is something that many people consider to some extent in the submission process. Obviously each author can decide what to make of it.

We've also posted a list of links to the submissions information on each law journal's website. That list can be found at http://www1.law.umkc.edu/Faculty/rostron/law_review_submission.htm.

For a helpful and more detailed discussion of the submission process and related issues for law professors, see Nancy Levit, Scholarship Advice for New Law Professors in the Electronic Age, 16 Widener L.J. 947 (2007), at http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=939007.

Good luck with your submissions.

However, we endorse the position that most articles can effectively convey their arguments within 40-70 journal pages. We believe that establishing page limit guidelines will enhance the quality of legal scholarship, and also shorten and improve the editing process. To that end, we strongly encourage authors submitting articles for our consideration to limit their pieces to 35,000 words, including footnotes. Manuscripts should be double-spaced and use footnotes rather than endnotes. Text and citations should conform to the Bluebook and Texas Law Review Manual on Usage & Style. Authors are also requested to provide a word count, including footnotes.	When requesting expedited review of a previously submitted article, please do so via ExpressO or by e-mail to the Executive Articles Editor, Scott Lerner, at nulr.eae2009@gmail.com The subject line of the e-mail should read 'Request for Expedited Review.'	If you have additional questions about the submission process, please e-mail the Executive Articles Editor, Scott Lerner, at nulr.eae2009@gmail.com, or call (312) 503-8435.
